AWARDS

Historic Preservation Award for
Excellence in Adaptive Use,
Historic Columbia Foundation

- As part of continued efforts to revitalize the North Main Street area of Columbia, Mashburn was selected to provide design-build services to repurpose this 70-year-old building into a barbeque restaurant.
- The owner wished to keep the building’s original elements whenever possible: existing metal barrel trusses and wood roof decking were cleaned to retain their character, doors and windows which had been closed were reopened, existing wood barn doors were reinstalled on the interior, the concrete slab floor was cleaned but left untouched to show its age, and finishes were selected to maintain a rustic feeling.
- Roll up doors were installed to provide an indoor/outdoor experience and view of the barbeque pit.
- Neighboring businesses were not affected by the construction and continued their operations uninterrupted throughout the renovation process.
